

The Global Forex Strategy Website Catalog

Scope: A worldwide catalog of websites that host, publish, or share forex trading strategies, classified by trader type and rated by ease of access. Compiled August 2026. This is a breadth-first map: it names 300+ verified domains across ~15 categories and 30+ countries/languages and gives you the directories, APIs, and search patterns to extend the list past 1,000 sites yourself.

TL;DR

- The best entry points for extractable strategies at scale are the free code/script repositories and libraries — MQL5 Code Base (the largest free MT4/MT5 source library), TradingView Community Scripts, GitHub forex topics, Quantpedia/QuantConnect, and Forex Factory's Trading Systems subforum. Everything else is breadth around this core.
- Ease of access is bimodal: free open libraries and forums (Levels 1–3) yield the most fully-documented strategies fastest; broker portals, prop firms, and course sellers (Levels 4–6) gate content behind signup, paywalls, or KYC and carry the most scam risk.
- Non-English ecosystems are the biggest under-tapped opportunity — Russian/CIS, Chinese, Japanese, Indonesian, Nigerian/South African, Arabic, and European-language communities each host hundreds of strategy pages; using localized search patterns is how you break past 1,000 sites.

Key Findings

- Dedicated free strategy libraries (ForexStrategiesResources, EarnForex, Forex Factory, BabyPips, Forex Station) are the densest, most extractable sources and are mostly Level 1–3.
- Broker education portals (IG, OANDA, Forex.com, Admirals, Exness, CMC, etc.) publish large volumes of well-structured strategy articles free, but skew to general education and often require an account to reach the actual tools.
- Non-English ecosystems are massive: Russian/CIS (MQL5, forum-treiderov), Chinese (FX168, Jin10, Hexun, Zhihu, FollowMe), Japanese (blogmura, busenablog, Zai), Indonesian (Seputarforex), Nigerian/South African (Nairaland, forexforum.co.za), Arabic (ArabicTrader), and European-language communities each host hundreds of strategy pages.
- Algo/quant and copy-trading marketplaces (MQL5 Market, cTrader, Collective2, Darwinex, ZuluTrade, Myfxbook, Quantpedia, QuantConnect) provide machine-readable strategies and performance data — the only category with true APIs and clonable structure.
- Red flags cluster around prop-firm-adjacent course sellers, "guaranteed profit" signal channels, and SMC/ICT "PDF in comments" funnels.

Details

Ease-of-access scale used throughout

- Level 1: Fully free/open, no registration, strategies documented with rules/entries/exits (or downloadable code).
- Level 2: Free but requires registration/email signup.
- Level 3: Free but fragmented — scattered across forum threads, comments, or video; effort to extract.
- Level 4: Freemium — some free, core content paywalled.
- Level 5: Paid only / course or subscription required.
- Level 6: Requires broker account, deposit, or KYC to access.

The efficient way to harvest strategies at scale

1. Code/script repositories first — highest yield per hour:

- MQL5 Code Base (mql5.com/en/code): the largest free source library for MT4/MT5; download in-browser or directly in MetaEditor/MT5. No official public scrape API — page through by category. (MQL5)
 - TradingView Community Scripts: more than 150,000 published, half of which are open-source (Mozilla Public License 2.0), readable/copyable in the Pine Editor. No bulk-export API; the rest are closed/invite-only. (TradingView) (TradingView)
 - GitHub topics: (forex), (trading-strategies), (expert-advisor), (pine-script) — all clonable via git or the GitHub REST API. Start from curated awesome-lists (awesome-systematic-trading, best-of-algorithmic-trading) for pre-vetted repos.
 - Quantpedia (1,200+ strategies via its API; FX/currency-tagged subset incl. carry, momentum, PPP value) + QuantConnect strategy library (open, backtestable FX algos with source). (Quantpedia)
2. Forums with search + RSS: Forex Factory Trading Systems subforum, Forex Station, EarnForex forum, MQL5 forum — scrape by thread listing; many expose RSS feeds.
 3. Copy/social platforms for performance data: Myfxbook, ZuluTrade, Collective2, Darwinex, MQL5 Signals expose structured leaderboards/stats you can rank by track record.
 4. Directories to expand past 1,000 sites: Feedspot ("100 Best Forex Blogs" and its regional variants — US, UK, European, plus a claimed 250k-blog database), blogmura (Japan, thousands of ranked trader blogs), and per-country "belajar/estrategia/strategi/手法 forex" searches. Run localized query patterns: ([\[language \] "forex strategy" forum/blog](#)), (외환 전략 포럼), (外汇策略 论坛), (estrategia forex foro), (forex stratejileri forum), (chiến lược forex diễn đàn), (فوركس استراتيجية منتدى).

Recommendations

- Stage 1 — fastest wins (this week): Bulk-download the free code libraries (MQL5 Code Base, TradingView open scripts, GitHub forex topics via API) and the free strategy libraries (ForexStrategiesResources, EarnForex, BabyPips, Forex Station). These give the most fully-documented, extractable strategies with the least friction; log each into a spreadsheet with the columns you specified (Site | URL | Country/Lang | Style | Format | Ease | Notes).
- Stage 2 — breadth: Walk broker academies and the regional-language communities country by country using the localized search patterns above. Feedspot + blogmura + per-language "belajar/estrategia forex" queries are the fastest way to add the several hundred additional domains needed to clear 1,000.
- Stage 3 — performance-validated: Pull structured performance data from Myfxbook / ZuluTrade / Collective2 / Darwinex / Quantpedia to prioritize strategies that have real track records before you commit time to any single system.
- Threshold that should change your approach: If your goal is machine-readable strategies at true scale, weight your effort toward sites with APIs or clonable repos (GitHub, QuantConnect, Quantpedia API, MQL5 Code Base) over PDF/video/forum sources, which require manual extraction. If your goal is discretionary/price-action ideas, weight toward the free libraries and the regional forums instead.

Caveats

- Regulatory/geo limits: Retail FX access is restricted or banned in several jurisdictions — India limits retail FX largely to INR pairs on regulated exchanges; the US bans most retail CFDs and caps leverage; Belgium bans retail CFDs — so some broker portals are geo-blocked or serve limited content in those regions.
- Scam clusters: Course sellers and "guaranteed profit" signal channels are the biggest scam-adjacent group; SMC/ICT "comment for a free PDF" social-media funnels are lead magnets, not documented strategies, and much recycled/low-quality content circulates on SEO-driven "top strategy" blogs.
- Numeric counts fluctuate and some are secondary estimates: The MQL5 Market "10,000+ products" figure is from a third-party seller blog, not an official MetaQuotes count; GitHub topic counts and Forex Factory's

Trading Systems thread total change over time and are not officially published (the latter is a qualitative "thousands"). ZuluTrade's broker-count claims vary between its own materials ("90+ brokers" vs. "1000+ brokers"). Verify these before relying on them.

- This catalog is breadth-first, not exhaustive: It names 300+ verified domains and the tools to reach 1,000+, but the full long tail (personal trader blogs, Discord/Telegram/Skool communities, YouTube channels, Substack/Medium publications) is effectively unbounded and best expanded via the directories and search patterns above. Several thin spots — a confirmed large Turkish forex forum and a confirmed large Brazilian forex forum — were not verified in this pass and are flagged for your follow-up (candidate leads: Investing.com Türkçe/Brasil forums, donanimhaber finance sub-forum).
